An executive coach and business leader, Dawn Rowley worked in human resources and manufacturing for more than 25 years prior to co-founding BenchStrength Coaching. She began her career in engineering, then moved into HR where she assumed higher levels of leadership. In her last corporate role, she was the vice president of HR for BrassCraft Manufacturing. Ms. Rowley combines her experience as an operating executive with her knowledge of leadership and employee development to assist clients in generating the change they need to reach their personal and professional goals. She is intuitive, action-oriented and understands the challenges that leaders face. She enjoys working with leaders and teams to create an environment where individuals can thrive, bring their best selves and drive business results.
