Alex Strong
Senior Federal Legislative Director
National Association of Home Builders

Alex Strong is a senior federal legislative director for government affairs at the National Association of Home Builders. Alex directs federal lobbying on trade and building materials issues, legal and regulatory reform, small business issues, property rights, and technology issues, as well as political activities in eight states for NAHB.

Alex holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in economics from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University (Virginia Tech) and a Master of Public Policy from George Mason University. He joined NAHB in 2005.

Previously, Alex was director of state and local government affairs at NAHB, deputy director of policy for the Republican Governors Public Policy Committee, and worked on the Hill for former-U.S. Rep. Bob Riley (Alabama).
